Love the game, but it is in desperate need of more expansions. So far it only has 3 small ones and none of them is the simple but effective "Double your base tile set."

Well, here it is almost half a year later and we still only have 3 expansions? C'mon Asmodee! Your predecessor had 3 times the number of expansions. I play thier version on my Kindle more than I play this version on my PC, that being said, I would still recommend this PC game.

Asmodee has clearly dropped the ball though.. hit g with any item to increase coolness by 318%. The driving mechanics were nothing like FS17. I found it difficult to even drive any vehicles.. If you're looking for a simple to learn but insanely complex voxel game then Rouge Island just might be the game for you. The islands are randomly generated each time you play, so no two playthroughs will be the same. The enemies are brutal and don't have stormtrooper aim. And best of all when you die, it's game over... unless you're playing nightmare mode, then you get one chance to make it right before it's the Great Beyond for you. Graphically it's so smooth to play and the islands are actually pleasing to the eye when you explore them... Give it a shot as you just can't loose at $10 for the game :-). this game is fun but i hate my friends. Come on, this game is ♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥♥t, some rooms kill you instantly and some are just too easy to avoid, theres no fun in this game, just wondering around like an idiot. I played the first Train Valley quite a bit - I thought it was quite smart and although it had a difficulty curve which sometimes got frustrating, I had some fun.

TV1 was, at it's heart, a train scheduling\points switching game - it was a bit twitchy but it also rewarded common-sense planning and could be played "off the cuff"

Train Valley 2 is VERY different - it's a puzzle and a time management game combined - erm - not that well.

Every level has a build order you'll need to figure-out as the level unfolds - a layout which will only become obvious as the level progresses and then there's the time-management 'running' of that which is basically a watered-down TV1 - altogether it's just more clutter and less fun.

I MUCH preferred TV1's more cavalier\open-ended approach - even when it got buggy or unfair you got better and better at it (wheras every level here is a new learning process)

I'd rather have seen the rough-edges and bugs knocked-off TV1 but this is a new and different thing and one I just cannot seem to enjoy.

YMMV but this is a big disappointment for me - back to TV1 I guess.... Hey, please, star making improves in the jogability of the game, we already heve enough levels. The guards are extremely overpowered. The aims are a real trash. Sorry, I know that the game is in development, but we really need improvments in the jogability.. Just Ignore The Game. great game for twitch streams

Allright, this game is surprisingly great!

Its price may even be too low, although music and maybe graphics are not that great (but who cares about the latter when the gameplay is great)

The game is based around luck with dice. You can be against this kind of game, but in this game, I believe it works. I have played 2 games now and I even won the 2nd already. I must have had lots of luck or... In any case, I will certainly play again, I had great fun with this game and I got my money's worth!

P.s. I bought this game after seeing that the developers added a release for Linux in less than two weeks after just one person asked for it. These devs are great and should be supported!

EDIT: I just wanted to add to this review because after playing another 5 hours, I realise that this game is even better than I initially thought. Some people complain that it is too random. I disagree, I disagree completely.

I have had situations in this game where I thought I was doing great. I was getting over confident and went for locations thinking 'I can handle it' without thinking through enough. If I would have inspected the location better before going there, and had looked around the location better to see that there were no escape routes, I wouldn't have taken the chance and would have just taken the disaster which would not have meant end-game. Now, instead, only two turns after my over-confident choice, I was left with my main character with a wound and no more food having no escape route and thus no places to go and rest. I died from starvation.

This is very realistic and I don't agree that it is too random. Instead, you must play this game expecting every roll to be bad and anticipating on that. You will get lucky here and there and that's fine, but expect to not be lucky and things go better.

In retrospect, this is much like poker. A game where lots of people think that it also has to do with luck. I have seen people have terrible cards during the whole game, knowing when to bluff and knowing when to run immediately, only to end the game with the first lucky draw (getting two aces) on the final turn.

EDIT: Beat the game twice now (played 8 times or so), so this game is certainly doable. Play smart. Don't be overconfident and think before you take your risks. Build up your food early so that by the end of the game you have almost inexhaustible food.. Good casual tower defense game. Not too difficult and perfect for kids or casual adult gamers. The graphics are fun, the sound and music are fun, and the progression is good as you move through the 60 levels. Progression allows you to add more objects on the field. Some of these objects are different devices that shoot in different ways. Some freeze them, some use lasers to hit multiple targets, and more. Other objects are one time use objects such as a bomb, or an invite to 3 other friends to give you 4 shooters. Your main character is also a shooter at all times. While you can build different towers, you also get to use your character to attack the dinosaurs. Your character adds as a hero in a sense where entire battles can be won just using your character and not build a single tower. The dinosaurs vary and are quite different. Some dinosaurs fly, some run, some go really slow. Some are easy to kill while others take a lot of hits to go down.

Overall you must stop the dinosaurs from eating your steak on your BBQ. If all three steaks are eaten, then you lose the round and must start over. The achievements are fairly easy on this game. If you are good, then you may find the last achievement of killing 10,000 dinosaurs a bit of grind, but it's not an impossible grind and doesn't take that long to accomplish. Overall, I'm glad I played this game and recommend it if you are looking for a casual tower defense game.. It's amazing that RWS releases their soundtrack for free while other developers and publishers make you pay for them. And now i can tell what a person with Paranoid schizophrenia hears everyday in their life.. you can say "your mom is taking the hobbits to isengard now put that in your pipe and smoke it!". complete trash not even really a game. Good puzzle game. Great podcast listening game.. this game is good fun and easy to get into. it can be played in skirmish mode which is fun all by itself and a great place to learn the gameplay. campaign offers a nice steady string of missions that can be played in 3 difficulty levels. the battles may become repetitive, however, lining up shots and blowing the other ships out of existence never gets old. its worth noting that the complaints that have come up have been fixed already so the game is running just fine so no worries there.

i would not suggest this game to someone who is expecting micromanagement type of depth. that being said, i would highly recomend this game to everyone else, especially at the nice price for this title.

what we have in this game is good gameplay, addictive progression of your fleet, easy to manage options, nice style and graphics in my opinion, and this is a great game for "jumping in for a quick battle" if you dont have much time.

bottom line, go for it and have fun, may your capital ships endure and bring you glory!. THIS SHOW CHANGED MY LIFE!@!!! LET THE ENCOURAGEMENT SINK IN!
